News in Brief

A leftist magazine pinpoints the new CIA chief in Britain.

The British magazine Time Out identified him as Edward Proctor, 56. He replaced Cord Meyer Jr., according to the article. Time Out said Proctor was responsible for pressuring the British government into issuing deportation orders against former CIA agent Philip Agee and reporter Mark Hosenball. Before coming to Britain, Proctor, who has spent 23 years with the CIA, was the agency's deputy director for intelligence, the article said. The article was written by Steven Weissman, former editor of Ramparts magazine, who co-authored a book with Agee.
